POST-ELECTION FUNDRAISING LULL FOR “BIG SIX” COMMITTEES

Fundraising by the two state parties and four legislative leadership PACs was subdued during the first quarter of 2020, with a combined haul of just $819,384, according to reports filed with the New Jersey Election Law Enforcement Commission (ELEC).

Jeff Brindle, ELEC’s Executive Director, said “first quarter blues” typically occur after an election.

“This is not unusual. The so-called “Big Six” committees are just starting to replenish their reserves after an election when all 80 Assembly members ran for office. Plus, there was a special state Senate election in the first legislative district and numerous local elections,” said Brindle.

While fundraising was not robust, it still was better than the first quarter, post-election hauls in 2014 and 2016, he noted.

“The big questions is whether the COVID-19 pandemic, which really didn’t strike with a vengeance until mid-March, will hurt fundraising by these and other political committees in the state going forward,” Brindle said. “ELEC will be closely watching to see if an even deeper than normal fundraising slump emerges.”

*Net worth is cash-on-hand adjusted for debts owed to or by the committee.

**Some spending totals exceed fundraising totals because the committee dipped into reserves or incurred debt.

Compared to the same quarter in 2016, both parties reported better fundraising, and Democrats spent more.

Brindle said even if the virus crisis doesn’t further depress party fundraising, current coffers are far less than they were a decade ago, in part because of tight limits on public contractor contributions and fundraising competition from independent special interest groups that have choked off many contributions that used to fill party warchests.

“ELEC continues to believe that legislative changes can help reverse this trend, which is important because party committees are more accountable and transparent than so-called “outside” spenders,” Brindle said. “We will continue to work with lawmakers to secure passage of new laws that will hopefully redirect more funds back into party coffers.”

State parties and legislative leadership committees are required to report their financial activity to the Commission on a quarterly basis.
